MR. SCOTT REJOINS

More on Topic of General Popular Education.

Editor Advertiser: I think you are misinformed about the educational system of Prussia. It is true she educated Prussian children. It is also true that the State made provision for the education of what you call alien children, if such a phrase have any meaning. No one of her well-drilled policemen stood at the school house door to prevent any child from entering, but truant officers paraded the streets and slums to gather in waifs and strays, to force them to go to school, though children of Russian, Turkish or Hottentot parentage. Such has been her enlightened policy and practice since Frederick the Great's time. As she has been so she is today. She has stood as an exemplar for all the other German States—indeed, for all Europe. The torch of knowledge is held free in all Germany to all aspirants of every nation who seek its elevating influence, to natives and aliens alike, from the primary school through the university, as it is in the Great Republic.

Professor Huxley has said that the chief function of any national system of education was to act as a selective process. The State should organize its system as an educational ladder with its foot in the gutter and its topmost round the university. All need to be taught reading and writing and numbers, because this is the basis of all further education. The chosen of nature is sometimes found in the hut and sometimes, though seldom, in the palace. If a potential Faraday can be found born in the hut, and the State pay a million of pounds for his thorough education, it gets him dirt cheap.

Shall we have a public censor to preside at the birth of every child and to brand it with the mark of a plantation laborer, a lawyer, a physician, a judge, a legislator, or a hummer? Who can tell without some elementary selection process who will be the captain of industry or an honor to the State in any way?

Now, Mr. Editor, I do not wish to bother you with your over-taxed nerves about the much-talked-of question whether the Constitution follows the flag; I should like to raise the question, however, as to whether the Porto Ricans are aliens. Are they subjects of Spain? Are they independent? Are they citizens of the United States, or are they men and women without a country? One thing is certain—those children of Porto Rican parentage who come here and are brought up here and those born here will be American citizens. We make no provision for returning them to Porto Rico, to the Fiji Island or to Central Africa. Shall they grow up in sudden ignorance without the ability to read and write the English language? Perish such a thought as to keeping them in ignorance, to be hewers of wood and drawers of water, and to produce wealth for the benefit of the few! This idea would have been a back number in the Middle Ages, rather belonging to some long and extinct dynasty previous to that of Rameses II.

One might be led to infer, Mr. Editor, that the children of plantation laborers are all put through a High School course—Greek, Latin, and the Calculus. As a matter of fact, of the nearly 12,000 children in school in these Islands, 80 per cent of them are in the first four years of the primary grades. There are less than 100 in a secondary or high school course under the jurisdiction of the Government.

That we are educating, in the United States, the young out of their proper sphere, is a wild vagary of a few unbalanced cranks, or of a very, very few recently made plutocrats.

We say nothing about the ethics of the question. I shall not touch on the promises made to the immigrants brought here for the production of our wealth.

Very respectfully,
M. M. SCOTT.

WHOOPIING COUGH.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—Jessie Pinkley Hall, Sprinville, Ala. This remedy is for sale by Benson, Smith & Co., Ltd., wholesale agents.

Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court declared in a lecture at Yale that the "jury system, as at present administered, is little more than a relic of a semi-barbarous age." When such strong words come from so eminent a jurist, can there be any surprise that citizens do everything they can to escape jury duty? This seems to be a case where the law-makers have an opportunity to achieve a great reform.
